Course Description

Speech-language pathologists are being asked to diagnose and treat complex fluency cases. The scope and nature of the fluency cases can make differential diagnosis and treatment challenging. This workshop will provide strategies for diagnosis and treatment in four areas of fluency disorders: cluttering, bilingualism, intensive treatment for children who stutter, and treatment focusing on communication excellence. Confusion over the definition of cluttering has created difficulty in identifying and treating cluttering. In this workshop, Dr. Kathleen Scaler Scott will present the latest research and clarify existing myths about cluttering. A straightforward definition will be presented and applied to strategies for assessment, differential diagnosis and treatment. Specific cluttering treatment strategies will be presented.
